Copper is again climbing up. Can't keep a good thing down.

Some people who boast that they never worry do not refer to those they do.

A fashion writer says "Lingerie waists should be squeezed and not rubbed." But suppose that the wearer objects?

Some leading Democrats demand that William J. Bryan nominate Roosevelt for president and the Nebraskan may take the hint in the hope that he will be asked to speak for himself.

District Attorney Jerome is said to have a mania for tinkering with clocks in his leisure moments and it is presumed that he is getting ready for an investigation of Father Time.

The smallpox scare did not last very long and the schools will reopen tomorrow. There is very little sickness in Globe and for the last year it has been the healthiest community in Arizona.

Chicago is "aroused" because it is declared that the dive keepers have been paying the police for "protection," when everyone in that city knows that this form of graft has been in existence for years.

Chicago is making a strong bid for making the Windy City a reform center, but it lacks a Ruff and his accompanying Heney, so that 'Frisco will be able to hold its own against all would-be rivals for some time to come.

Some of the territorial papers are publishing a rumor that the Amalgamated Copper company is back of the strike in the Warren district. It would not be surprising if one of these enterprising journals came out with the report that the strike was instigated by Tom Lawson.

Arizona Republicans are being exhorted by their leaders to support Senator Foraker for the presidency in 1908. It is true that the Ohioan stood by Arizona when all others had deserted in obedience to the "big stick," but we believe that the senator would have been "agin" us if Roosevelt had shown any inclination of being "wid" us.

Globe and Globe mining district look better every day and not a week passes without its important developments. The vast strike in the Old Dominion lowest workings followed by the preparation of plans for making the Old Dominion smelter one of the largest in the southwest means that it is only a matter of time when Globe will surpass any mining camp in the southwest.

Speaking of Sam Campbell, the new postmaster of Chicago, the Washington Herald says that "he has refused to accept a nomination for congress in a district overwhelmingly Republican, preferring to hold his place at Springfield." From the past performances of that body, we should think he would more than prefer to remain in the Illinois legislature than take a chance at Washington.

Governor Hagerman of New Mexico has at least the support of the honest people of that territory, notwithstanding his summary dismissal by President Roosevelt "to make room for a Rough Rider. It might have been predicted, however, that an honest man could not retain the governor's chair in the sister territory very long. New Mexico's bosses are as strong politically as their methods are rotten and Arizona may continue to pat herself on the back for turning down joint statehood in the emphatic manner of last November.

SOLONS IN THE CANAL ZONE
It would be presumptuous, of course, for a rank outsider to attempt to defend statesmen so thoroughly capable of taking care of themselves as Representatives Cannon, Tawney, Sherman and the others who recently enjoyed a voyage in the tropics as the guests of their colleague, Mr. McKinley of Illinois. and yet, since Uncle Joe has spoken, we are constrained also to say a word in their behalf in view of published statements which represent them as being more or less incensed because they did not receive instantaneous attentions commensurate with their importance during the time they were in the Panama canal zone, says the Washington Herald.

Surely such men as those composing the McKinley party, to say nothing of the others on board, did not expect the health officers to make exceptions in their favor when such action might have resulted in the introduction of fever or other disease into the zone. Those who enact laws naturally would not wish to break them. On this point we are sure that we but reflect the opinion of Mr. Cannon and those who sailed with him.

As to the alleged vexation of the traveling legislators because Mr. Stevens and other canal officials did not stop work and give all their time to the visitors, we submit that such quiet, unostentatious persons as Representative McKinley and his guests could only have been pleased by the absence of demonstrations in their honor. Here in Washington, and in their respective homes, the high and puissant positions they occupy in the national legislature cause them to be the objects of notice and adulation which can be nothing but distasteful to them. They visited the isthmus as private citizens, not in their official capacity. Mr. Stevens, Mr. Smith, Colonel Gorgas and others of consequence in the canal zone were busy making the dirt and the mosquitoes fly. The people here at home are anxious to have the waterway completed as soon as possible, and we feel sure that the members of the McKinley party, all of them representatives of these people, would have frowned upon, rather than welcomed, any tendency on the part of the canal makers to put pleasure above business by dropping their various tasks and devoting themselves to the entertainment of the distinguished gentlemen in their midst.

And if, as he stated in the now discarded stories, Mr. Stevens actually did leave Mr. Cannon abruptly when the train on which they were passengers reached Culebra, and did go about his work there without even asking to meet Uncle Joe's companions, it seems to us that the former chief engineer made as stern a sacrifice on the altar of duty as any we have heard of recently. Think of inspecting steam shovels and sweating workmen when one might be sipping cooling drinks and listening to funny stories told by such inimitable raconteurs as Mr. Tawney and Mr. Sherman and Uncle Joe himself.

If unusual heat and lack of attention for a day or two affected in that way such strong men as those composing the McKinley party—and we do not believe it—is there not some excuse for slight lapses on the part of individuals who remain on the isthmus month after month, and who have, we assume, even greater trials and disappointments to contend with?

For our own part we did not need Uncle Joe's assurance to convince us of the baseless character of the whole yarn. On its face, it was stamped not so.

Stealing of Famous Letters

Letters, stolen or forged, have played a discreditable large part in recent American political history. Through the theft and publication of the "Maligan letters" the enemies of Blaine succeeded in defeating him for nomination in 1876 and for election in 1884. Through the forgery of the "Morey letter" in 1880, in which General Garfield was made to oppose Chinese exclusion, the Democrats sought to promote the election of Hancock.

Through the faked "Murchison letter" in 1888, in which the British minister, Sackville-West, was decoyed into saying that the re-election of Cleveland would be favorable to British interests, the Republicans materially assisted the election of Harrison. Through the theft from the mails by a Cuban sympathizer of the letter addressed by the Spanish minister at Washington, Dupuy de Lome, to a Spanish editor at Havana, his ill-timed reference to McKinley as a "cheap politician" was given to the country in 1898, and aggravated a situation which made war inevitable. Through the publication of the "Storer letters" in 1906, in an attempt to vindicate gratuitous officiousness, American diplomacy got a black eye abroad. Now comes the Harriman-Webster letter, with its painful implications, stolen, as is charged, by an employee and purchased and published by a newspaper.

Toward each of these illustrations of treachery and chicanery the attitude of the people has been too complaisant. Lump them together, however, and their demonstration of "American smartness," and of the extent to which our political decisions have been shaped by forgery, felony and outrageous breach of confidence, is as humiliating as it is overwhelming. The first arrest on record for this species of "enterprise" comes tardily.—New York Mail.

STRUCK DEAD AS HE QUIT SHAFT

One of the oddest accidents which has occurred in the history of the Warren district was that which occurred Tuesday afternoon about 2:30 o'clock, when Dave Nichols, a miner in the employ of the Copper Queen company at the Cuprite shaft, was struck on the head by a timber which had constituted a portion of the gallow's frame, and died almost instantly.

When the day shift had finished and signalled for the hoist, the engineer lowered it to where the men were working. Five men besides Nichols boarded the cage and rode to the surface, reaching which four of the men hurried from the cage to the change room, as miners usually do. Nichols and a friend of his stepped on to the surface and stopped to talk when the lad gone about four feet from the collar of the shaft.

When the engineer saw the last man step from the cage he pulled the lever to hoist it a couple of feet so that a hoist could be inserted across the collar of the shaft for the cage to rest on and prevent its falling in case anything should happen to the machinery. The cable had already begun to wind about the drumhead, when a crackling was heard and one of the timbers which held the shaft broke and was pulled out directly over where Nichols and his friend were standing. The former did not have time to get away from under the falling timber and was caught squarely on the head, fracturing his skull so that he died within a very few minutes.

The deceased was about 22 years of age and came to Bisbee a short time ago. Prior to that he had lived in Douglas.

The Fallen Mighty

"It isn't necessary to go to the Waldorf to see the nobility," said the man about town. "Go down on Second avenue to the Hungarian restaurants there. The proprietor of each one is an exiled baron, the pianist is a prince, the violinist is a duke, the waiter with the mustachios was a titled landowner in his own country, and each and every one of the patrons, myself excepted, is a scion of Russian, German or Hungarian nobility, banished for some reason or other to the wilds of New York."—New York Press.

A Comparison of Food and Alcoholic Drinks

Famous New York Physician Shows Wherein the Two Things Differ and Why Alcohol Is Not a Food

The following extract is from a table of antitheses between food and alcohol. The table was prepared by Dr. W. S. Hall of Chicago, and appeared in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical association:

Food	Alcoholic Drinks
1. A certain quantity will produce a certain effect at first and the same quantity will always produce the same effect in the healthy body.	1. A certain quantity will produce a certain effect at first, but it requires more and more to produce the same effect when the drug is used habitually.
2. The habitual use of food never produces an uncontrollable desire for more, in ever increasing amounts.	2. When used regularly it is likely to produce an uncontrollable desire for more, in ever increasing amounts.
3. After its habitual use a sudden total abstinence never causes any derangement of the central nervous system.	3. After its habitual use a sudden total abstinence is likely to cause a derangement of the central nervous system.
4. Foods are formed in nature for nourishment of living organisms and are therefore inherently wholesome.	4. Alcohol is formed in nature only as an excretion. It is, therefore, in common with all excretions, inherently poisonous.
5. The use of food is followed by no reaction.	5. The use of alcohol is followed by a decrease in the activity of the muscle cells and the brain cells.
6. The use of food is followed by an increase in the activity of the muscle cells and brain cells.	6. The use of alcohol weakens and staidies the muscles.
7. The use of food strengthens and staidies the muscles.	7. The use of alcohol makes the brain less steady and accurate.
8. The use of food makes the brain active and accurate.

Any man who has formed a love for alcoholic drinks has formed a love for poison. The sooner he can rid himself of the thirst, the better off he will be, mentally, physically and morally. The McKenna Liquor Cure has the effect of neutralizing the alcoholic poisoning and putting a person back to his original condition. It is entirely harmless to the physical being and can be safely taken by women or children.

An office of the McKenna cure has been established temporarily in rooms 14 and 15 of the Max Lentin building in Globe, where the treatment is administered and a cure guaranteed.

A LITTLE BIT OF EVERYTHING

Child Making Long Trip Alone
Master Charles Montague, seven years old, a bright faced lad en route from Scotland to Oklahoma City, Okla., was an unexpected visitor at Baltimore & Ohio headquarters yesterday afternoon.

The little fellow is making the long trip unaccompanied, and after leaving New York Friday evening he in some way lost his ticket. He was taken off the train here Friday evening and was turned over to the Baltimore & Ohio officials until some arrangements could be made to provide him with a new ticket. This was done yesterday afternoon and the little fellow left on the 3 o'clock train for St. Louis, from whence he will proceed to Oklahoma to meet his father, who is anxiously awaiting his arrival.—Baltimore American.
